BLOCKADED

Every Household in Barre Should Know How to Resist It.

The back aches because the kidneys are blocked.
Help the kidneys with their work.
The back will ache no more.
Lots of proof that Doan's Kidney Pills do this.

It's the best proof, for it comes from citizens of Barre.
Mrs. T. D. Strout of 137 Seminary street, Barre, Vt., says: "My kidneys were affected for about five years, causing me a great deal of pain in the small of my back. I would have such sharp twinges shoot through me when I attempted to stoop or lift anything that I had to rest until the attack passed off. I was so nervous I could not sleep nights, but tossed and turned continually. I was so impressed by what I read about Doan's Kidney Pills curing others that I got a box at E. A. Brown's drug store. After using it there was a noticeable change for the better in my condition and I kept on taking the remedy until the pains in my back disappeared. I could do my housework with ease and could sleep well nights. For backache and kidney trouble Doan's Kidney Pills are a most reliable medicine."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-McIlburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

CHINA BARS OPIUM.

Rigid Edict Issued to End the Use of the Drug.

London, England, Nov. 24.—The Times announces that an anti-opium edict has been issued by the Chinese government through the influence of Viceroy Yuan Shi-Kai, which is the most severe document of the kind ever issued by a Mongolian ruler. It stipulates that the cultivation of the poppy must cease in ten years; that all persons addicted to the use of opium must be registered, and only those registered will be allowed to buy the drug; that dealers must distribute to those having the habit antidotes and prescriptions to counteract the craving, free or at cost price.

There are also provisions for the organization of anti-opium societies and for the encouragement of those now existing. Teachers, soldiers, sailors and all semi-public persons are given three months in which to discontinue the use of the drug, and government officials must signify at once when they will be prepared to give up the habit.

The edict also announces that all exportation of opium will cease in ten years and prohibits the importation of morphine.

Loneliness of Perfection.

It was the day of a grand parade of a certain section of the Boys' Brigade. The company was marching proudly through the streets. Suddenly one of the boys happened to look down at the instructor's feet. "Will you excuse me mentioning it, sir," he remarked, "but you are the only one in step."—London Globe.

"Aw, g'od, Mike," said the British soldier, attempting to end the argument, "you're a lobster."
"Ye better me," retorted Mike: "sure, a lobster's a wise animal, fur green is the color fur him as long as he lives, an' he'll die before he puts on a red coat."—Catholic Standard and Times.

Made Happy for Life.
Great happiness came into the home of S. C. Blair, school superintendent at St. Albans, Vt., when his little daughter was restored from the dreadful complaint he names. He says: "My little daughter had St. Vitus' dance, which yielded to no treatment, but grew steadily worse, until as a last resort we tried Electric Bitters, and I rejoice to say that three bottles effected a complete cure." Quick, sure cure for nervous complaints, general debility, female weakness, impoverished blood and malaria. Guaranteed by the Red Cross pharmacy. Price 50c.

HERE AND THERE.
A Smart Idea For a Walking Suit Theater Hits.

One of the new walking suits in of blue broadcloth and has a plaid skirt and a jaunty postillon coat with a deep belt of black satin. The front and back of the coat are braided in arabesques in black, and there are rows of tiny silver buttons on either side of the front of the coat, which has a vest of blue velvet cloth.

In order to overcome the objections to headgear in the theater, modistes have created what is known as the Illupituan theater hat. These little hats are formed of a bandeau or simply a twist of ribbon or velvet and have by way of trimming an aigret, a single tip or a small cluster of roses.

One of the most attractive of the season's blouses is illustrated. It is equally pretty carried out in silk or any lightweight material. The fronts are plaited from a yoke and employment of the fabric edged with a bias band of striped silk. A tye vest fastened with three silk covered buttons is a fetching addition and gives a distinctive touch, together with the collar of lace and silk.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

A New Adam and Eve

(Original.)

The patient was placed upon the operating table, the surgeon put on an apron similar to those worn by butchers, an assistant administered an anesthetic, while the nurse stood waiting. As soon as the patient came under the influence of the drug the surgeon proceeded to open his breast and take out a rib that had been so forced out of position by an accident that it endangered the man's life.

When the patient came to himself he looked wildly about him. No one was near except the house surgeon and the nurse.

"What's all this about?" he asked wonderingly.

"You're all right," replied the doctor. "You've had an accident. We've taken out a rib."

"A rib! Out of me?"

"Yes. Be quiet. All depends upon your not exciting yourself."

The patient closed his eyes and began to mutter incoherently. The doctor looked at the nurse and shook his head.

"He's delirious," he said.

The nurse shuddered.

Suddenly the patient opened his eyes and, fixing them on the doctor, said excitedly:

"You say a rib has been taken out of me?"

"Yes."

"Well, what?"

"Where's the woman?"

"What woman?"

"What woman? Why, the woman that has been made out of the rib."

The doctor glanced ominously at the nurse, who said nothing, but looked troubled. Surely the man was badly "out of his head."

"I say, where's the woman?" repeated the patient excitedly.

The doctor whispered some words to the nurse's ear, then, pointing to her, said to the patient:

"This is the woman. Now go to sleep."

The patient stared at the nurse, then went on incoherently:

"You're Eve, are you? Made of a rib taken from my body. We must be married. By the bye, how in thunder did Adam and Eve get married with no one to marry them? Send for a clergyman at once."

The nurse drew back. The doctor made an effort to pacify the patient, but without effect. Then he took the nurse aside and told her that the man's life depended upon their quieting him, and there seemed to be no way to do so but to yield to his wishes. After some pleading on the doctor's part the girl consented to go through a marriage ceremony which he assured her would be meaningless. An assistant was called in to personate a clergyman, and the doctor led the nurse to the bed.

"Are you a real sky pilot?" asked the patient.

The man proved a poor liar, and the patient began to rave:

"Get out o' here and send a real dominie! Do you think I'm out o' my head to be fooled this way?"

The doctor sent the man away and suggested that they call a clergyman.

After all, there was nothing legal about a ceremony with a man who didn't know what he was doing. The patient raved on, and the nurse finally consented.

A real clergyman was called, and the moment the patient looked at him he seemed to be satisfied that he was what he pretended to be. The patient took the nurse's hand, and the ceremony was performed. The moment it was over the would be groom closed his eyes and lay perfectly tranquil.

"You've saved his life," said the surgeon to the nurse. "Never fear. There's no danger of your getting into a complication. I, a physician, was present, and, knowing that the patient's life depended upon our humoring him, he being delirious, I persuaded you to act a part. All this I will put in an affidavit."

The nurse did not appear either to fear that the mock marriage might bring her trouble or doubt that the doctor's affidavit would be all she would need to ward it off if it came. Indeed, the doctor in speaking of the matter to the matron told her that it was singular what an effect even the semblance of a marriage would have over a woman. The pretended bride, he said, seemed to be as much affected as if she were going through the real thing.

The man minus a rib did not return to his delirium. When the doctor called the next morning and found his mind clear he supposed the patient had forgotten all about the marriage ceremony.

"Doctor," he said, "was I delirious yesterday when I came out from the influence of ether?"

"You were."

"Talked about my lost rib being turned into a woman?"

"You did."

"Insisted on a marriage?"

"Yes, and to humor you I persuaded your nurse to play the part of Eve. But it's all right. You needn't worry. It was only a mock marriage."

Meanwhile the nurse, who was present, had turned away.

"Suppose nurse claims it isn't?" pursued the patient.

"That's ridiculous. But even if she did I would."

"Nurse," interrupted the man on his bed, "did you intend to marry me yesterday or not?"

The nurse turned, with a smile and a blush.

"I did."

The doctor stared first at one, then at the other.

"Oh, that's all right," said the groom. "We're old spouses."
